Michael's peers describe him as innovative, efficient, and strategic.

Michael started his career at Weltman as a summer intern and then a law clerk within the compliance department, learning the intricacies of federal and state debt collection statutes. Today, he works with the consumer collections group using a holistic and analytical approach to produce positive results for all recovery solutions.

Michael prides himself on analyzing every detail of a case and working them into a bigger picture. When asked what sets him apart from other attorneys, he said, "I've simply learned from the best." In Michael's free time, he enjoys spending time with his wife and pets, traveling, and cooking.
