With his reputable career, Michael understands the overall subrogation process and can offer unique solutions that produce results.

After obtaining his undergraduate degree, Michael looked at the field of law and decided that this was something that was not only of interest to him but something he could do well. Now, with over 25 years of professional work, five of those years in the collections industry, he says he understands the overall process taking each side into account.

Michael has worked as an adjuster and a regional claims manager in his previous roles. He has experience working on the plaintiff and defendant sides and directly for insurance companies. With this background, Michael is able to offer a unique perspective in the industry. Resourceful, analytical, and fair-minded are just a few ways his clients have previously described him.

In his free time, Michael enjoys spending time with his family, exercising, and following the financial markets.
