Clients would describe Adam as organized, analytical, and determined in his collection efforts.

Adam's passion for the law came after he received his accounting degree. He craved a higher professional degree and more experience, so law school it was. As a consumer collections attorney, Adam works closely with credit card companies and other lenders. They come to him when they have trouble collecting delinquent balances on accounts and when their collection efforts have not been successful. Adam is eager to establish a reputation as a knowledgeable young attorney.

In his spare time, Adam loves sports and music. He is a huge Bengals fan and a season ticket holder. Adam also enjoys playing the guitar when he can.
