Bobby (Jamison)'s passion for law began early, shaped by a natural aptitude for debate, a curiosity about government, and a desire to address legal challenges in his community.

Jamison combines his formal legal education with over three years of hands-on experience in the collections industry, having served as a full-time legal assistant while completing law school. This unique path allowed him to apply classroom knowledge directly to client matters, building both practical expertise and a deep familiarity with legal processes and client needs.

Since joining Weltman, Jamison has contributed significantly to subrogation litigation, assisting clients in recovering funds paid to insured parties from at-fault third parties. His approach to law emphasizes diligence, professionalism, and ethics, traits frequently noted by colleagues and clients alike. He distinguishes himself by prioritizing proactive solutions, responsive communication, and results-driven strategies, ensuring that every matter is treated with urgency and purpose.

Jamison credits his education and early career experiences for honing his analytical skills, legal writing, and strategic thinking. Licensed in Kentucky, he is also an active member of the Kentucky Bar Association and continues to learn and grow under the guidance of seasoned attorneys, bringing both knowledge and practical insight to every case. Outside the office, Jamison is deeply connected to his hometown of Pikeville, Kentucky, and values family, community, and culture. He serves on the alumni scholarship board for his fraternity, enjoys playing alto saxophone, and is a fan of classic rock—especially Led Zeppelin. Avid about travel, he has explored cities including London, Paris, and Rome and looks forward to future adventures. Through both his professional and personal endeavors, Jamison blends dedication, curiosity, and enthusiasm, striving to make a positive impact on his clients and community.
